

This is a letter that was sent to The New York Times.

June 9, 2009

Letters to the Editor
The New York Times
New York, New York

Forgive me if I do not know the details in this doomsday spiraling, imploding experience we all are involved in, but this is the way common sense sees things.

Now, I would imagine the money that was around in 2000 is still floating around somewhere. It was not sent out to outer space or buried in the ocean, so perhaps is in the hands of the few. I would venture to say it is not in the hands of the bloodstream, working class of America. You cannot separate money from blood. It is the bloodstream of the world.

Now there are those of the business world who are the bloodstream of our economy and then there are those who are the blood suckers. All government, from schools to the capital, are blood suckers for they have no blood of their own.

Now we can either keep giving the blood sucker our blood until we are all bled to death or we can say, "Enough," and stop giving them any more blood.

We either stop paying all taxes and deplete the power of the blood sucker or we both perish.

James 5:1 — "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, your money is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days."

Marie Kolasinski

Marie Kolasinski
Piecemakers